

Angels on Earth

*Dedicated, with Gratitude, to all in the Nursing Profession
Nurses Week—2009*

With the first spark of Life,
From whence the baby is conceived,
Grows the soon-to-be child
A full life ahead, yet to be achieved.

For some children, the beginnings may vary,
Their form of life, not quite the same,
Life occurs as it must
For what is, there is no blame.

The young parents provide the love,
And care, best that they can
But the task is difficult
So the Angels lend a hand.

And the parents of parents
Their life mostly told,
Enjoy the memories of their life;
Thoughts of youth, in one now grown old.

The now elderly parents
Still seek the best quality of Life,
But health can oft be fleeting,
One may lose a husband, another a wife.

And their now adult children provide the love,
And care, best that they can
But the task is difficult
So the Angels lend a hand.

Our Angels on Earth,
These Nurses who abundantly care,
Tend to all those in need,
It matters not who, it matters not where.

May God's Blessing descend
Upon these Angels on Earth
As they selflessly care for all,
From those now aged, to those at birth.
